After watching

- 8 Divide into three groups. Each group is responsible for researching more information about one of the following key events in the American Revolution: the Boston Tea Party, The Battle of Bunker Hill, The Declaration of Independence. Use Internet resources to find out more about your particular topic. Then form new groups with one member of each of the original groups and explain to the others what you found out about your event. If possible make a poster for your group with pictures and short descriptions of the three events in the American War of Independence.
- 9 The American Constitution is still in use today and people often refer to its original principles. Go to <http://elizabethclaire.com/store/media/general/free-download/US-Constitution-in-Simple-English-updated.pdf> and look at the summary of the main articles on page 5. Imagine you are in a country setting up a completely new Constitution, following a revolution to win freedom. Working in groups of four, decide on a simple 10-point Constitution for your new State. Think about the form of government you want, how Parliament will be organised, elections, who makes the laws and so on. If possible, print your Constitution and put it on the wall to display to other students.
