The story on screen so far...

Tom Hanks plays Chuck Noland, an ambitious engineer for the delivery company Fed Ex. His life is ruled by the clock; 'We live or die by the clock,' he says in the film, but his own clock-work routine ends suddenly when, on a business trip, he is involved in a plane crash which leaves him stranded and alone on a remote island in the Pacific Ocean, where he will remain for four years.

- 4 What two things does Chuck do in this scene from the list of survival priorities in exercise 1.
- 5 From what you read about Chuck in the introduction why do you think he looks after the boxes (which were being delivered by his company)?
- 6 Why is it also ironic for him that he still has his pocket watch, which no longer works?
- 7 In Robinson Crusoe Robinson has one advantage over Chuck Noland when he arrives on the island. Read the first lines from Text 1 of the novel again and say what it is.
- 8 If you found yourself in this situation what do you think you'd miss the most from your present life?
- ☐ family ☐ friends ☐ little luxuries (bed, etc.)
☐ TV ☐ other (specify)
- 9 James C. Simmons, author of Castaway in Paradise says how Defoe's novel Robinson Crusoe has never been out of print as it represents, although in a rather romantic way, one of man's most popular fantasies. Why could the idea of being alone on a deserted island be especially appealing in our modern times?
